

Tourism Promotion--Tour in Beijing

Don't miss 3000 years' history and 5000 years' culture

The capital city of the China, Beijing (Peking) is a fast-growing, dynamic metropolis that, while courting foreign businesses and visitors, maintains a firm grip on its rich cultural heritage and a strictly Communist social order. It is a monolithic showcase that can give a distorted view of China to foreign visitors.

"Until you reach the Great Wall, you're no hero."

Great wall: The Great Wall of China was built over more than two thousand years. Construction on the first section began between the 7th and 6th century BC, and the last work on the wall was done between the 14th and 17th centuries.

Summer Palace: The wonderful buildings and courtyards wander beside the lake, along the waterways and climb the low slopes of the hillside. The arched bridges, pretty promenades, decorated 'corridors' and breezeways all lead visitors through ever-changing views and scenery. Here the marvelous marble boat, there an old theatre, over there an island reached by small wooden boat and in the distance the hills, with a temple on the hillside, framed by dark trees.

Silk Factory: In this factory you can not only see how the silk is processed from worm to the final product, but also learn some histories of silk in China.

Temple of Heaven: It was where the emperor came every winter solstice to worship Heaven and to solemnly pray for a good harvest. Although in imperial times commoners were not allowed to enter the enormous park, now for a minimal fee Chinese citizens can enjoy it all day long.

Tiananmen Square: In the square tourists can climb the Tiananmen Rostrum, attend the national flag raising ceremony every morning at sunrise, visit the National Museum of China, and go to the Mausoleum of Mao Zedong, in which one will see the body of the great Chinese leader.

Forbidden City: It is the best preserved imperial palace in China and the largest ancient palatial structure in the world. The splendid architecture of the Forbidden City represents the essence and culmination of traditional Chinese architectural accomplishment.

Wander through the Qianmen Dajie Pedestrian Street, lined with shops, teahouses, and restaurants.
